Narrative Writing

Introduction:

We all go through different situations in our lives. Some of these situations turn into beautiful memories. However, both types teach us and give us valuable lessons about life. The story I will write is about a happy / sad situation that happened to (write the main character even if it you or another person).

The story:

Have you ever experienced a moment when _____ (write the topic) ___? It all started when ___ (write a beginning) _____. It was a day that I/they/we/she/he will never forget because it changed everything. Firstly, ___ (write the first action) ____. I remember feeling ____ (write the feeling) ___. After that, _____ (write the second action) _____, which made things even more exciting/ complicated. Then, ____ (write the third action) _____. At that moment, I realized ____ (write what you feel or learn) _____. Suddenly, something unexpected happened ____ (write the fourth action which is the problem) ____. It was as if everything stopped for a second.

Last action and the ending:

Finally, ____ (the last action which is the solution) _____. Looking back at that day, I learned an important lesson which is ____ (write what you learn) _____.

To conclude, this experience taught me that ____ (write an idea or something moral) ___, and it will always stay with me as a story worth telling.

T. Zainab Alaraimi

Write a story about the following topics:

"A time that you experienced something truly frightening".

Introduction:

We all go through different situations in our lives. Some of these situations turn into beautiful memories. However, both types teach us and give us valuable lessons about life. The story I will write is about a frightening situation that happened to me.

The story:

Have you ever experienced a moment when you were truly frightened? It all started when I went camping with my family in the mountains last summer. It was a day that I will never forget because it changed the way I think about safety and courage. Firstly, we set up our tents and started making dinner near the campfire. I remember feeling happy and excited to spend the night under the stars. After that, the weather suddenly changed. The sky turned dark, and strong winds began to blow, which made things even more complicated. Then, we heard strange noises coming from the forest nearby. At that moment, I realized how scary nature could be at night. Suddenly, something unexpected happened. Our lights went out, and everything became dark. It was as if everything stopped for a second, and my heart started to race.

Last action and the ending:

Finally, my father managed to fix the light again, and we all stayed close together inside the tent until the storm passed. Looking back at that day, I learned an important lesson, which is to always stay calm and prepared in unexpected situations.

To conclude, this experience taught me that fear is a natural feeling, but courage means staying strong even when you're afraid. It will always stay with me as a story worth telling.